

Full disclaimer I did this thank you letter assignment in my junior year english class so after I remembered I still had it somewhere I just used the information I had already gathered. But before I remembered I had it on my computer I was thinking of people to do it on. There was a panicked moment where I felt like I didn't have anyone or anything to do it about, but it just helps to remember to be thankful for the small things. Using my one from last year I did mine on Reed Hastings who is the creator of Netflix, a service I use literally every single day.

The thing my letter was trying to accomplish was that I am truly blest that Hastings decided to come up with Netflix because of all the joys it brings to my life. Now that they have some killer Netflix originals it's hard to say goodbye to Netflix. But even before then the people that work at Netflix certainly know the right shows and movies to add to their library. Though I'm sure Mr. Hastings is well aware that people enjoy and appreciate his service, I believe he has never gotten a letter before commending him on his ingenious idea. So if nothing else I believe my letter helped to make his day.

When doing research for an assignment like this you want to be sure you have the most reliable sources. However since I did do all of my research last year I just double checked my sources to make sure they I felt they were reliable. I also had to find two new sources to meet the five source requirement. When it came to finding the two additional sources I used the data base the school pays for to get secure reliable information. I did go with some news sources such as 60 seconds but since 60 seconds is meant to interview and inform I felt that it would be an okay source. This means the information I got was told by him and meant for the public.

Some of my other thoughts of who this letter could have been to was Benedict Cumberbatch since I am a huge fan of his and love all of his work. I feel as actor he really gets into character and brings his character to become him. I also thought of the man who invented indoor plumbing because I cannot camp without a toilet and shower nearby. I am a full supporter to indoor plumbing. In the end since I already had the information for Reed Hastings and since I really do appreciate Netflix I decided to go with that.
